

Local Group of Religious Women Involved

The Collaborative Initiative to End Human Trafficking is a group of religious women and lay professionals in northern Ohio who are working together to advocate for the prevention and abolition of human trafficking. The group is involved in networking with local and national organizations, researching, and learning more about the complexities involved in this issue, and promoting legislation against human trafficking. The Collaborative Initiative also provides educational events for churches, hospitals, social services organizations, schools, local law enforcement as well as the general public featuring area speakers and resource people. Catholic Charities and the Pro Life Office have been working with the Collaborative for the past few years. You may contact them for more information at 440-354-2254 or mailto:collaborative_initiative@yahoo.com.
